

METHOD FOR REDUCING SHALLOW TRENCH ISOLATION CONSUMPTION IN SEMICONDUCTOR DEVICES

Abstract

A method for reducing shallow trench isolation (STI) consumption during semiconductor device processing includes forming a hard-mask over a semiconductor substrate, patterning the hardmask and forming a trench within the substrate. The trench is filled with an insulative material that is implanted with boron ions and thereafter annealed.